UPDATE ON THE BOUND CONGRESSIONAL RECORD

In early 1986, the Public Printer, with the concurrence of the Depository Library Council, deemed necessary the distribution of the bound Congressional Record in microfiche format to all selecting libraries. Pursuant to that decision, the Library Programs Service proceeded to develop technical specifications for the conversion of the bound Congressional Record to "microfiche only" format beginning with volume 131.

Before public announcement of the bound Congressional Record microfiche contract solicitation, however, the Chairman of the Joint Committee on Printing (JCP) suggested in a letter to the Public Printer that back issues of the bound Congressional Record be designated as one of the publications to be tested for distribution to depository libraries in CD-ROM format. The JCP letter noted, "The amount and type of information involved, as well as the anticipated savings to be achieved, appear to make it an ideal candidate for such a test. If the greatest possible savings are to be realized, it would make sense to forego the costs of converting this information to microfiche."

Those volumes that are already in the "pipeline" to be converted to fiche are not affected by this ruling, so volumes 127 and 128 will be distributed to those depository libraries selecting item 993-A in microfiche.

Volumes 129, 130, 131 and subsequent volumes will not be issued to depositories in microfiche, but are designated for distribution in CD-ROM.

A Message from the Superintendent of Documents to Academic and Public Depository Librarians

Dear Depository Librarian:

As was first announced at the October 1987 meeting of the Depository Library Council, the GPO is sponsoring a contract study entitled Users of Academic and Public Libraries. The impetus for this study was an inquiry made last summer by the Office of Technology Assessment, asking the GPO "how many users of the depository library program are there, and what are their characteristics?"

Realizing that such data were not available, GPO issued a Request for Proposals (RFP) to investigate this question. Information Management Consultant Services, Inc. with Charles R. McClure and Peter Hernon, was the successful bidder on the project. The objectives of the study are to:

- review and analyze the existing literature on users and uses of depository libraries;
- identify the number of users of academic and public library depositories;
- categorize these users by type of library (academic versus public) and by basic demographic characteristics.

The investigation--a user, not a use, study--addresses very basic questions about the Depository Library Program. It is an especially important and timely study, as we must be able to demonstrate to the Congress the importance of the Depository Library Program to the American public.

At the Spring 1988 Depository Library Council meeting in Charleston, S.C., McClure and Hernon discussed the study and the method by which it would be completed. As a result of feedback at that meeting and the recommendations of the study's Advisory Committee, the contractors requested, and have been granted, an extension of the contract term through December 1988.

This four-month extension provides for data collection during late September 1988, allowing additional time for pre-testing the data collection instruments, and for GPO to print, duplicate, and mail the data collection instruments.

GPO expects to mail out the data collection instruments to academic and public depository libraries at the end of August 1988. The libraries will be asked to collect data during the last week of September 1988. This time period was recommended by participants at the March 1988 Council meeting and by members of the Advisory Committee.

It is important to understand that there are no existing data on the number and types of users of academic and public depository libraries. This study is intended to make a necessary beginning effort to fill that information void.

Thus, I want to stress the importance of academic and public library participation in this study. Ultimately, the success of the study will depend on your involvement and the quality of the data you collect. Please mark your calendars and inform your library directors that the data collection instruments will be mailed out in late August 1988, so that data collection can occur in libraries during the last week of September 1988.

I consider this study to be an essential component of our ongoing effort to improve the effectiveness of the Federal Depository Library Program. GPO is fully committed to the successful completion of this study, and has engaged a renowned and highly competent team of contractors to carry out the study. In fact, Professors Hernon and McClure have published a noteworthy article in the April 1, 1988 issue of Library Journal entitled, "GPO's Depository Library Program: Building For the Future." The article is well-written and offers some good insights into the authors' thinking about the Depository Library Program.

Thank you in advance for your cooperation in this effort. Over the years, I have come to appreciate the strong commitment of depository librarians to the principle of expanding the limits of information and knowledge. I am confident that your commitment to this principle will inspire your fullest support for this landmark study of depository library users.

Sincerely,

DONALD E. FOSSEDAL

Dear Documents Librarian:

Several months ago, the Library Programs Service (LPS) distributed Revision 54 of the NCIC Operating Manual, from the Justice Department. We have been apprised recently that this manual is an internal document for administrative use only. LPS has not and will not distribute the basic manual.

For this reason, I am directing that you immediately remove this transmittal from your shelves and destroy it by any means that will prevent disclosure of its contents.

Dear Depository Librarian:

On April 19, 1988, I wrote to you concerning the publication, Infertility: Medical and Social Choices, from the Office of Technology Assessment. At that time, I asked that you remove this book temporarily from your library shelves because of a distribution embargo placed by the agency.

I am pleased to report that the Office of Technology Assessment has eliminated the embargo on this publication. Please release this document for public use and circulation.

April 1988

McGraw Keynotes Literacy Symposium

Interest in the May 25 literacy symposium, which I have mentioned previously, continues to grow. I am especially pleased to report that Harold McGraw, Chairman of McGraw Hill, Inc. and founder and Chairman of the Business Council for Effective Literacy (BCEL), has agreed to serve as keynote speaker at the symposium's closing dinner.

Cosponsored by GPO's Academic Advisory Council and the Adult Literacy Initiative of the U.S. Department of Education, the symposium addresses the problem of illiteracy in our Nation and its particular impact on the printing industry. If you haven't done so by now, it is not too late to register for this very special industry event scheduled for the Capital Hilton here in Washington. Contact the Research and Engineering Council of the Graphic Arts Industry, Inc. at (215) 388-7394 or GPO's Literacy Coordinator Charles Potter at (202) 275-6626.

Second Master Agreement Covers 4,000

On March 25, representatives of labor, management, and the Joint Congressional Committee on Printing signed only the second Master Labor Agreement in GPO history. Effective the 25th of this month, the new 3-year agreement covers approximately 4,000 employees in 12 bargaining units and is the result of nearly 2 years of negotiations.

I am personally pleased with the effort and agree with the assessment made by Congressman Frank Annunzio, Chairman of the Joint Committee on Printing, who said of GPO's labor-management program: "The Government Printing Office has a long tradition of labor union representation. It is the first of all the Government departments to recognize unions and bargain collectively. You working men and women are following a proud tradition. As Chairman of the Joint Committee on Printing, I join with my colleagues in congratulating both labor and management for completing this master agreement."

International Conference Agenda Set

In February, I told you of the progress of our plans to host an International Government Printers' Conference here in Washington from June 13-17. Enthusiasm for the Conference is extremely high and our preliminary agenda has now been compiled. Government printers from around the world have volunteered to present papers and will be addressing such topics as: "The Management of Change," "Passports and Security Printing," "Government Printing as a Profit Center," "Patents," "Printing Technology," "Computer Assisted Buying," and "Procurement of Equipment and Materials."

We now anticipate as many as 60 delegates representing at least 30 nations. In addition, support from throughout our industry has been strong and we are looking forward to one of the most successful gatherings of international printers ever. Along with making their formal presentations, it is anticipated that the delegates will create a permanent International Government Printers' Association while at the Conference.

Availability Of Data Files Increases

More than a year ago I told you of our plans to begin selling data files of some of our publications. Since then, the number of available titles has grown and the operation has been placed under the Superintendent of Documents. Provided on a Standard 1600 BPI, ASCII, IBM-compatible, 9-track magnetic tape, the files may be purchased on an individual basis or through a subscription. Nineteen items are now available, including the Congressional Record, Federal Register, and Daily Bills. Individual tapes for Daily Bills and most other publications are $125 each. Individual tapes for the Record or Register are $175 each. One-year subscriptions are priced at: $29,300 for the Congressional Record; $37,500 for the Federal Register; and $18,750 for Daily Bills. To order data tapes or for additional information, please call Sarah S. Wilson at (202) 275-3328.
